

HOLD CELEBRATION AT CENTRAL MISSION

Charity Workers Hear Secretary Daniels and Other Speakers at Anniversary.

The thirtieth anniversary of the Central Mission was celebrated yesterday with special services morning, afternoon, and evening, during the course of the last of which, held at the mission, Secretary of the Navy Joseph Daniels made the principal address.

Secretary Daniels was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Charles Wood, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, who declared the Secretary is one of the men high in official life of Washington who has not neglected his church duties since coming to this city. The Secretary spoke of the great work that is being accomplished by missions and declared that Washington is one of the greatest fields for mission work because of the number of people drawn here in the hope of obtaining Government employment who were disappointed.

The morning services were held at the Western Presbyterian Church, and were conducted by the Rev. J. Harvey Dunham. During the course of the services in the afternoon the pastors of several local churches made addresses on the work of the mission. The officers of the mission are: Board of directors, E. E. Richardson, chairman; Jackson A. Winner, secretary; William H. Ramsey, treasurer; Charles J. Landrum, E. Breuninger, Jeanne M. Patterson, E. A. Stevens, Nicholas Van Sant, A. M. Gooper, and Clifford F. Thompson; superintendent, John S. Bender; board of trustees, H. B. Kinnear, William H. Martin, Ivory G. Kimball, Daniel Frazer, and W. Clarence Duvall; women's co-operative committee, Mrs. W. H. Ramsey, Mrs. H. E. Riser, Mrs. E. E. Richardson, Mrs. J. H. Pile, and Mrs. G. H. Markward.

CHEVY CHASE ASKS FOR LARGER SCHOOL

Home and School Association Urges Campaign for Additional Facilities.

Need for a larger school at Chevy Chase is set forth in the annual report of the Chevy Chase Home and School Association. Newly elected officers have announced that they will make every effort this year to arouse interest in the project for additional school facilities in that suburb.

These officers are Edward F. Colladay, president; E. C. Graham, vice president; Miss S. R. Deane, second vice president; Mrs. George Winchester Stone, secretary; and Joseph A. Wiegman, treasurer. These officers serve on an executive committee with Dr. D. D. Davis, Mrs. A. H. Adkins, and Miss M. E. Elia.

The reports were made and the officers elected at the annual meeting last Friday evening. The present enrollment is 49, or eleven classes in a building where the capacity is only eight classes. The report shows that in the last six months thirty-five new homes have been built in Chevy Chase, D. C. alone. This fact is cited as proof of the need of more school facilities.

The report states that the Chevy Chase School is beautifully situated with ample grounds and many shade trees and a large trash box has been set up, so that the grounds may be kept free from papers, etc. In this crusade the children are urged to help.

In the interests of safety large traffic signs have been put up at the intersection of the Chevy Chase road, near the order of Mayor Raymond Pullman, chief of police, saying "School near—slow down."

The meeting Friday heard a paper on the work of the late Miss Elizabeth V. Brown by Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, of the Board of Education. The Chevy Chase School is named the Elizabeth V. Brown School.

He has been an evangelist thirty years and claims 3,000 conversions. His wife accompanies him and conducts meetings for women only.

Prof. R. W. Ramsey, Missouri, is his musical director, and the service is supported by a large chorus choir.

Rain Fails to Dampen "Back to Saddle" Move

Heavy mist and a dampening drizzle failed to put a crimp in the "back to the saddle" movement inaugurated in Washington yesterday. Many persons, men and women, braved the threatening skies for a ride through Rock Creek Park.

Those who are interested in the movement hope to have a more auspicious day next Sunday with crisp air and an October sun.

Sunday School Nestor Active for 64 Years

George C. Cook Also Celebrates Fifty-third Anniversary of His Marriage.

FELICITATED BY FRIENDS

At 76, He Still Has Charge of School of 500 at Trinity M. E. Church.

George C. Cook, "Nestor of Washington Sunday School Workers," this month rounds out the sixty-fourth year of his connection with the historic Sunday school of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, at Fourth street and Seward square southeast.

Saturday evening, when his family, including his wife and three sons, assembled at his home at 719 Fourth street southeast, he also celebrated the fifty-third anniversary of his marriage. He was the recipient of congratulations from hosts of friends, and especially from teachers and others in the Sunday school, where he has been an active worker for more than half a century and superintendent for more than a score of years.

Mr. Cook, now seventy-six years old, is one of the oldest Sunday school workers in Washington in point of service. He is still active in the church and Sunday school of Trinity Church, and each Sunday he has charge of the school of more than 500 members, one of the largest on Capitol Hill.

Employed 52 Years.

For fifty-two years he has been employed in the Washington Navy Yard, and at the celebration of his golden wedding anniversary, when he still was in the Government employ, he received a letter of congratulation from President Taft, which hangs, framed, in the parlor of his home.

Sixty-four years of service in the Sunday school of Trinity is all that Mr. Cook claims, for when he was twelve years old, he joined the congregation of Trinity Church and began his active connection with the Sunday school. But it is probable that his attendance at the school reaches more nearly the three-score-and-ten-year mark, for as he put it, "I went to Sunday school about as far back as I can remember."

The period of his connection with Trinity Church and Sunday school is a period of that congregation, which dates back to 1802, and includes the period of development of Capitol Hill, in which the church often had a narrow escape.

"I can remember the older folk telling of the days when the congregation worshipped in a tobacco warehouse at Greenleaf Point, where the arsenal now stands," he said. "To that old church President Jefferson used to ride on horseback, and he would hitch his horse to a tree and go in like any other citizen, to attend the services in the dark, old warehouse, with its low ceilings and a small, high window."

Church Had Moved.

"But when I first attended the church it had moved to Fourth street, between South Carolina avenue and Seward square. There it later built a structure, which is still standing, and in which a Methodist Protestant congregation now worships. At first the church was known as the Ebenezer M. E. congregation, then it was called the East Washington Methodist Church, and when it moved to Fourth street it was called the Fourth street M. E. Church, and finally, the church of the present site, where a $75,000 structure was built, it was called Trinity Church."

Many prominent men were members of the church in its early days, and its membership, in the Fourth Street Church, is still large.

Delegation From City Will Go to Fredericksburg in Hope of Landing Convention.

The first steps toward bringing the annual encampment of the United Confederate Veterans to Washington in 1917 are to be taken by the delegation of veterans and their wives who represent Washington at the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Grand Camp of Confederate Veterans at Fredericksburg tomorrow, Wednesday, and Thursday. More than a score of members of the Harry Heth Camp, of this city, and a number of veterans belonging to Virginia camps who reside in Washington leave today to attend the convention which promises to be one of the largest in the history of the Virginia camp.

Efforts will be made during the meeting, and it is expected the efforts will be successful, to place the grand camp of Virginia on record as favoring the holding of the national encampment in Washington two years hence. The last encampment was held in Richmond, where the place for the meeting was chosen. This cannot be changed, which is the reason the delegates from this city are working for the year following.

It is expected that interesting reports will be read at Fredericksburg of the Richmond encampment. The Virginia veterans were the hosts of the comrades on that occasion for the first time in many years. During the course of the meeting there will be camp fires and special celebrations commemorative of the battle of Fredericksburg.

The Washington delegates selected to attend the encampment include M. S. Thompson, Major Robert W. Hunter, Commander Fred H. Leight, Honorable Col. Hillary A. Herbert, William A. Gordon, W. Hungerford, John T. Callaghan, Edward P. Jones, W. L. Wilkerson, Richard S. Denny, James T. Petty, Capt. D. C. Grayson, Capt. W. C. Whitham, E. M. Angelo, W. E. Perkins, G. F. Drake, and the Rev. J. A. Norton.

GEORGE C. COOK.

Church J. Wesley Hostler first professed Christianity, and later became one of the best known ministers in the denomination. In the Fourth Street Sunday school Mr. Cook saw the index finger of the future, and was converted to Christianity. He later became general editor of the church's publications, wrote a number of books on religious subjects, and was dean of the theological faculty at Vanderbilt College.

"One feature of Sunday school work of former days has died out," said Mr. Cook. "That was the annual May procession, made up of the Sunday schools of all Protestant churches on Capitol Hill and vicinity. Generally thousands of pupils would march to the Capitol Grounds or to the Mall, and there have a day's outing. An old-time resident of Capitol Hill, Matthew Wright, was so impressed by this spectacle that he bequeathed the Sunday school $1,000, which still draws yearly interest which is used in the work of the school."

Started Scholarship.

"The school about twenty-five years ago raised $500 for a perpetual scholarship at Dickinson college, at the time of that institution's centennial, and a scholar is still supported there by the Trinity School's fund. One of the prominent men in our school during my early days as an officer was Thomas Somerville, a prominent business man of Capitol Hill."

Mr. Cook has been a teacher, secretary, treasurer, assistant superintendent, and superintendent of the Trinity school. He was first elected to head the school in 1873, then resigned, and was elected again in 1880, and has served continuously ever since.

He organized the Sunday school at the Eleventh Street Methodist Church, and attended to it until 1890, when he resigned, for whom the McGinnis public school is named.

Mrs. Cook is still living. She has assisted her husband in his church and Sunday school work. Three sons also were at the Cook home to join the celebration of their parents' fifty-third wedding anniversary.

Robert C. Cook, is an architect, and drew the plans for the new colored high school, now being erected. The architect is Elmon A. A. Cook and Henry P. Cook.

URGES COMMITTEE TO BOOST DISTRICT

Civic Betterment Association Would Have Delegates Before Congress.

A committee to represent the District of Columbia before Congress is proposed by the Civic Betterment Association, which met at 1228 Thirtieth street northwest yesterday.

The association suggests a committee to include members of the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, the Retail Merchants' Association, the Association of Old-time Inhabitants, and every citizens' association in the District. This committee would appear before the proper House and Senate committees whenever any legislation directly affecting the District was pending, much as committees from labor and patriotic organizations do at present.

President J. Walter Mitchell believed such a committee would be of great benefit to the Commissioners in securing a recognition of the needs of the District.

As a result of a discussion, during which the charge was made that certain litigation in local courts have been victimized by persons who threatened to make public alleged unsavory facts, a committee is to be appointed to make an investigation and report to the District Supreme Court and the local Bar Association.

The association gave Major Raymond W. Pullman a vote of thanks for the manner in which the city was policed during the recent G. A. R. encampment.

This Week's Photoplays

CRANDALL'S.

Sartorial splendor, as exemplified in the extreme styles and finery of Valeska Suratt, was the big attraction at Crandall's today, and will be shown again tomorrow, Wednesday, and Thursday, where the former musical comedy and vaudeville star is seen for the first time in a photoplay. "The Soul of Broadway" is the name of the piece, produced by the William Fox Company, with a cast headed by William Shay. Miss Suratt maintains her reputation as a wearer of daring modiste's concoctions, and at the same time presents a tragic story.

Clara Kimball Young, in the World Film Corporation's production of "The Heart of the Blue Ridge," is scheduled for Friday and Saturday. This photoplay was written by Waldron Bailey, and the company producing it includes Chester Barnett and Robert Cummings, both of whom are favorably known in Washington.

GARDEN.

Wilton Lackaye, the Washingtonian, who was greeted in person in a vaudeville sketch by the home folks last week, is the star of the photoplay production, "The Man of Shame," at Moore's Garden Theater today. The play is an adaptation of the novel, "Roger Le Honte," by Jules Mary, and will be seen tomorrow and Wednesday also. The production has been made by a company of Universal players, with Harry Meyers as director, and the cast includes Rosemary Terry, Victor Louis, and Mr. Meyers.

VALESKA SURATT.
The Former Musical Comedy Star, to Be Seen in Motion Pictures at Crandall's the First Four Days of This Week.

Picture Plays Have Put a Second Broadway on the Map

There are two Broadways in the world—one of them that almost everybody in Washington who knows anything about the actors and actresses has seen time and again, and is almost as familiar with as the Pennsylvania avenue. It is lined with stores and cafes, has brilliant electric signs along a portion of it, and is a general promenade for actor folk. It is situated in—Los Angeles, Cal.

The fact that there is another Broadway in New York which is also quite as prominent as a promenade for actors and actresses, and has a number of bright lights and cafes is rather confusing to a lot of people, and it has confused a number of motion picture directors. The directors have been so confused that up to a short time ago they were accustomed to take pictures of Broadway, Los Angeles, or Market street, San Francisco, and call it Broadway, New York.

But trouble came because, while Broadway, New York, is familiar to most people who go to the theater and motion pictures, the name of a great thoroughfare, it is Broadway, Los Angeles, with which they are familiar actually because it probably appears in more motion picture productions than any other street in the world. Its very buildings are becoming familiar to motion picture patrons, and they would recognize it no matter where they saw it.

It is because of this fact that John Emerson, the well-known actor who has become one of the Triangle Film Corporation's most efficient directors, moved his entire company of actors and actresses from Los Angeles to New York in order to make a picture play of Broadway, New York, because the action called for scenes on that street and not on Broadway, Los Angeles. The business of transporting an entire company across the continent for a few scenes appears expensive, but the motion picture patrons have become too sophisticated to put up with imitations or substitutions.

"The American motion picture public," said Mr. Emerson upon his arrival from the West, "has become highly educated in the newer art. It will no longer accept New York scenes staged in Los Angeles, or any other place, other than New York itself. So whenever we have a production whose action takes place in New York, we shall travel across the continent and do the work in and about the Bellanca Yonkers studios, or, of course, when the scenario demands it, in various parts of the city itself."

The audience in the high-class motion picture theater of today is as intelligent as the audience which formerly patronized exclusively the speaking stage theaters. This audience feels that there is something incongruous when they see a scene supposed to be laid in New York city, which exhibits the typical palms and pepper trees of Los Angeles.
